Introduction

This volume forms the twelfth part of my studies of the fishes of the Albatross collections. It mainly comprises the great group of gobioid fishes, with the lesser aberrant groups of echeneids and the callionymids or dragonets. The localities given refer chiefly to the Philippine Archipelago, with lesser lots of materials from the Netherlands Indies, China, Formosa and Oceania, also visited by the Albatross. In preceding volumes I have given acknowledgements, which likewise apply here, with special mention to Dr. Hugh M.³ Smith's able management.

Though several new gobies have recently been described from this material a number of others also believed to be new will be included in a forthcoming preliminary paper, now in preparation.
